

Jim Futurist, Trends & Innovation Expert Consultant • Keynote Speaker • Author • Columnist
CARROLL Home | Contact | Search

ABOUT JIM KEYNOTES & WORKSHOPS BOOKS TRENDS VIDEO BLOG

Jim Carroll's blog

Recent video clips

Grab a feed and share!

XML ShareThis
 SHARE
 make it mobile

Follow me on Twitter

powered by YouTube

Join the e-mail list!

Subscribe to "Memo from the Future"

Categories

- About Jim Carroll
- About the recession
- Articles
- Branding & marketing
- Change
- Faster
- Gen-Y & Gen-Connect
- Global economy
- How to be innovative
- Human capital issues
- Industry - Agriculture
- Industry - Associations
- Industry - Consumer & food
- Industry - Education
- Industry - Financial
- Industry - Health Care
- Industry - Hi-tech
- Industry - Manufacturing
- Industry - Prof. services
- Industry - Retail
- Innovation
- Keynotes
- Leadership
- Press
- Strategy
- Trends
- Video

"Those are people who died" - the "other" Jim Carroll, dies at 60

Almost fifteen years ago, when I first got onto the speaking circuit, I registered the JimCarroll.com domain name. Often, that drew me many visitors looking for the "other" Jim Carroll.

Sadly, that other Jim Carroll is no longer with us.

Jim Carroll, poet, punk rocker, Pulitzer Prize winner, and best known as author of the Basketball Diaries, died of a heart attack in New York at the age of 60.

When I was in my 20's, I bought all his albums, and several of his books. I was a fan. I am sad to see him go. I did meet him in person once.

For more information on Jim Carroll, visit the CatholicBoy.Com Web site, which has been meticulously maintained by a fan through the years.

Jim Carroll, futurist, trends & innovation expert

- »Previous posting: Speeding into recovery - what's up for the fall of 2009?
- »Return to main blog page
- » Next posting: Achieving growth: innovation in the post recession economy

Permanent link to this item ...posted September 14, 2009

.....